It can create detailed reports of clients' behaviors, and restrict a client's outgoing calls to specific locations. For example, you can run the Sipreport.exe utility from the application folder to display a list of all SIP clients installed on your system, automatically log the client behavior and save it as a file, as well as track the client's outgoing calls. Then you can utilize the Sipreport.vbs script to control the clients' behaviors in the desired manner. You can do this with pre-stored settings and schedule when these reports should be created automatically, either when the system is restarted or the SIP client is launched. The Sipreport.exe program can also automatically start and use the Sipreport.vbs script, which allows you to create a report using predefined settings. Sipreport.exe doesn't need to be restarted for the settings to be updated. Sipreport.exe is designed to work with SIP-based clients (such as Skype or SBC) and SIP Trunking IPs. There are two versions available: Sipreport.exe and Sipreport.vbs. Sipreport.exe is a console application
